

TALK OVER WIRES.

PLAN FOR CONNECTING TELEPHONE EXCHANGES IN VA.

THE LONG-DISTANCE COMPANY.

Mr. Young Tells What It Wishes to Do and What Its Relations to the Southern Bell Company Really Are.

There is every indication that Richmond will in the near future be connected by telephone with Norfolk and Lynchburg. In the cities named, as well as in Petersburg, franchises have been granted, and 'phones constructed by the Western Telephone Construction Company are being operated or are being placed in position. President J. N. Keely, of the Western Telephone Construction Company, will, as announced in yesterday's Dispatch, come here to-morrow, with a view to establishing long-distance telephone lines in this State; and it is believed by the Richmond Telephone Company officials that he has requested a meeting of the telephone officials from Petersburg, Lynchburg, and Norfolk, for the purpose of having the three cities connected with this. It is thought that the meeting will be held in the Times building to-morrow afternoon.

This company is not the only one, though, that purposes connecting Richmond with the outside world by 'phone. The American Telephone and Telegraph Company will, if permitted by the city fathers, extend their lines into Richmond, and give us telephone communication with New York, and thereby with other larger cities.

ANOTHER COMPANY WANTS TO COME.

Mr. Clarence E. Young, Senator Daniel's law partner, is here in the interest of the American Telephone Company, which presented its petition to the Council at its meeting on Monday night, asking the right to install and operate its lines in this city. He was seen yesterday by a Dispatch man, who suggested that his company might encounter some trouble on account of the local trouble that existed between the Southern Bell Company and the Richmond company.

Mr. Young replied that if any such opposition presented itself it would, in his judgment, disappear as soon as the people discovered that they were dealing with a company that was totally distinct and independent of any other telephone company. "This Long Distance Company," he said, "has nothing to do with your local disturbances. It simply requests a franchise to operate here, and asks for a fair hearing upon its merits."

"What instrument do you use?" he asked him.

"The instrument is known as a long-distance telephone. It does not belong absolutely to the Long Distance Company, because the patents are owned by the American Bell Telephone. When the Long Distance Company was organized it bought the exclusive right to use these patents from the American Bell Company."

THE OLD COMPANY HERE.

"It is not the old company here the Bell Company."

"It is the Southern Bell Company. I will explain fully to you that you may understand. Some years ago the American Bell Telephone Company was organized. It owned all patents relative to telephone apparatus, except certain patents in this line that were owned by the Western Union Telegraph Company. At that time the American Bell Company also owned certain patents relating to telegraphic apparatus. As I understood it, these two companies exchanged. The American Bell acquired all telephone patents, and the Western Union acquired all telegraph patents. Thus, you see, these two companies could have no competitors, because they owned all the patents. They paid big money for them, and all their privileges were given to them by law. They were monopolies, it is true. They were, however, creations of law, and no one will deny the fact that these two great and wealthy corporations have done more for the advancement and progress of American civilization than any of the arts and sciences known in our history."

"After this, the American Telephone and Telegraph Company was organized to do a general long distance telephone business. The long distance apparatus and instruments were owned by the American Bell Company. The Long Distance Company was, therefore, compelled to purchase from the American Bell Company, at their own figure, the right to use this long distance apparatus. This they did, and have established their lines all over the East, North, and West. Their lines connect over 7,000 cities. You can now talk from Boston to St. Louis, and from New York to Chicago. This company is now desirous of extending its lines into the Southern States and cities. Franchises have been granted in Louisiana, and other places, and they hope to secure a franchise in Richmond."

HAS PLENTY OF MONEY.

"It is the only national long-distance telephone company in existence. It has over $10,000,000, and I think it would be a good thing to have some of the money invested down South. Besides, we want to see our Southern country keep pace with the North in every modern improvement, and in this case of progress the long-distance telephone which connects the business centers has become a modern necessity."

"What is this Southern Bell Company that we have here?" asked the reporter. "As I understand," Mr. Young replied, "the Southern Bell Company was organized to do a local telephone business in the Southern States. It bought its rights from the American Bell Telephone Company, who also owned the patents now used by the Southern Bell. I believe that the patents here are the ones required by the American Bell Company from the Western Union."

"Do you ask for a local privilege as well as a long-distance franchise?" "Certainly. We must have it. We can't connect with either of these companies here. You may give the proposition to any businessman in town, say Major Ginter, for instance, and he will tell you that unless he could have the right to place a telephone in any business house or residence in this city that would be a long-distance instrument and was able to pay for it, he would not invest one dollar in building a fine and expensive plant along the country roads of Virginia."

AS TO OUR LOCAL EXCHANGES.

"Why is it that you cannot connect with these exchanges?"

"I will answer your question first, as to the Southern Bell. The service of the Southern Bell is what is known, I believe, as the ground circuit, and I think they use iron wires. Their instruments are entirely different from those used by the Long-Distance Company. Besides, the Long-Distance Company uses heavy copper wire and metallic circuit and their instruments are of the highest grade known to the art. The terminal facilities furnished by local companies must be in harmony with the system known as the long-distance telephone system. This applies to instruments, batteries, circuits, switch-boards, and all appliances and apparatus and parts of apparatus in the most minute detail. It is a physical impossibility."

"What is the difficulty in connecting with the new company? They have copper wire and metallic circuit. However, the same reasons apply. The telephones used by the Richmond company are not long-distance instruments. Suppose the Richmond company were to connect into the Richmond exchange, and you called central office and asked for New York. The result would be you could not talk, because this telephone is not a long-distance instrument, and is entirely different from the one at the other end of the line. You can't run a narrow-gauge car on a broad-gauge track, can you?"

tirely different from the one at the other end of the line. You can't run a narrow-gauge car on a broad-gauge track, can you?

A BUSINESS REASON.

"Suppose, however, for the sake of argument, that the difficulty could be overcome. There is a business reason that would prevent the Long-Distance Company from connecting with your local exchange. And, to illustrate, let us suppose that Major Ginter owns the long-distance telephone. He invests thousands of dollars in building his lines through the South and connects Richmond and Lynchburg. Both of these cities have new companies. A man in Richmond calls up a man in Lynchburg. Major Ginter's property, which is worth $10 to the other man's $1, is entirely out of his control, and he is at the mercy of two or three companies, with no supervision or authority whatever. The company here would be in position to say: 'Well, Major Ginter, we will have to charge you 25 per cent. of your receipts to send messages through our exchange to Lynchburg.'"

"Mr. W. P. Roberts, who is president of the Lynchburg company, knowing that he is master of the situation in Lynchburg, could easily afford to say: 'Well, Major Ginter, I will take 25 per cent. on all messages sent through my exchange.' Major Ginter would be in a bad fix. He would be compelled to charge a high rate to make a small return on his investment, and to do this the charge would be so high that the service would not be used."

MUST HAVE THE RIGHT.

"No, sir. The Long-Distance Company must have the right to put in a local exchange if it so desires. It has such a right in all the cities where it operates. There must be a uniform system of operation. This even includes office force, and carries along with it timing of messages, knowledge of rates to be charged, reports of grossing of service, knowledge of the routes to be taken transmitting messages between points, system of accounting, making of reports, responsibility for collection of charges, and the responsibility for errors and omissions, including the power of the Long-Distance Company to compel a compliance with its rules and regulations in all respects."

"Every detail will be thoroughly considered by the committee, and I see no reason to doubt that they will grant the franchise."

Mr. Harrison's Work in Full.

Rev. J. R. Harrison, greatly encouraged in this work at Fulton. With a little financial help he will be able to get into his beautiful upper room. Windows and seats are still lacking. Mr. Harrison has done all excellent work, and his congregations are large and increasing. He has, during the past month, had eleven additions to his church.

Funeral of Mr. Donkley.

The funeral of Mr. Charles W. Donkley, of Fulton, whose death occurred at his home, No. 56 Louisiana street, on Monday night, took place at the Fulton Baptist church yesterday afternoon. Mr. Donkley was engaged in the plumbing business, but had been in failing health for several weeks.

NOT YOUR STOMACH.

Pure Blood and Good Nerves Mean a Happy Life.

More Ills Arise From a Deranged Nervous System and Impure Blood Than From Local Disorders.

You may think it is your stomach, but you will find that your stomach trouble is only an indication that you are debilitated, and debility is the result of nerve weakness and poor condition of the blood. A vigorous condition of the nerves and generous supply of pure blood will relieve your stomach troubles, or any other disease that you may have, such as tired feeling, nervousness, insomnia, dyspepsia, liver complaint, heart weakness, kidney trouble, neuralgia, rheumatism. You can strengthen your nerves and enrich and purify your blood by using Dr. Greene's Nervura, the great invigorator and nerve strengthener whose magical restorative properties have brought back
